twelve innings, the visitors winning out by the score of 1 to 0. In direct contrast to the day previous, the Senators were on their toes from start to finish, and went through the entire twelve innings without an error. Several pretty plays were pulled off, but the effective pitching of both Mullen gave two bases on balls and th twirlers made a great majority of the chances easy to the players.

The exceptional plays of the afternoon was a remarkable stop back of second base by McCormick of Bay's fast grounder in the initial inning, the former getting the latter at first on a one-hand stop and quick throw to first. Bay is one of the fastest runners playing base ball, and that a ball could be plucked out of safe territory in time to retire him at first borders on the supernatural. Barry rushed over at the crack of the ball on the bat, and at the crack of the ball on the bat, and although his game leg was something of a handicap, he dove down in the dust, picked up the sphere, and while half way around made a beautiful throw to the waiting Herring. It was an inspiring play with which to start the game, and the good example kept the locals going all

The other sensational play didn't call forth any mighty effort, but was of the sort and probably saved a run. "inside" sort and probably saved a run.
After two were out in the second inning.
Carr started his remarkable batting exhibition with a triple to right center, the ball going nearly to the fence. Donovan hurried in the ball and Carr had to slide to reach the third sack. In the excitement to reach the third sack. In the excitement of jawing at the umpire over the close decision, the ball was lost sight of, Hill having tucked it under his arm. Buelow was on the line coaching, but he, with Carr, forgot all about "Scranton Bill" Coughlin's copyrighted trick, and the tall first baseman walked off third and got ready to score on the next hit. Waiting until Carr was about four feet from the Carr was about four feet from th sack. Hill with a shout made a dive for him, but the runner woke up with the yell and started home. Down the line the two raced and Hill finally threw the ball to raced and Hill finally threw the ball to Kittredge and Carr was touched out at the plate. Carr and Manager Armour were mad all through, and the way they gave it to Buelow for allowing the play to be pulled off was a caution. When the spectators realized that Hill had nabbed his man they arose in a body and cheered him

Patten and Joss were the opposing pitchers and both did remarkable work, the lat-ter having the better of the argument, as he heid the Senators down to four hits, while the former was touched up for ten. Patten's work classes up high, as he did his best work in tight places, four different times the visitors being in a position when a safe hit meant a run, while Joss had very little trouble of this sort, as the Senators generally went out in their order of going to the plate.

In the fifth inning Carr and Turner singled with two out, but Bemis' fly to Donovan closed the inning. In the eighth the Clevelands looked dangerous again, as they had two on bases with two out and Bay at the bat; but the fleet-footed youngster forced Bemis at second, and again the game was saved.

Senators were dangerous several times also, but the difference in the batters at the plate decreased the chances of scoring. In the second Donovan singled clean-ly with two out, stole second nicely, but was left when Herring was called out on strikes. Again, in the tenth, Huelsman was passed to first on balls and on two outs at first worked around to third, Herring closing the inning with a pop fly to Bradley. In the eleventh the Senators had their last chance to score. O'Neill pulled off a fine double to center that nearly took off the legs of Bay in its speed, and Hill beat out an infield hit, the first named reaching third. Cassidy then closed the inning by ingloriously striking out.

The Blue Legs got busy in the twelfth and pushed the one run necessary to win over the plate. Stovall started off with a single through the box, but Bradley flied out to O'Neill. It was not thought possible that Carr could land his fifth straight hit, but the ex-Detroiter did the trick. Turner then made himself conspicuous with a splendid double into right center, and Stoyall crossed the plate. Bemis flied out to Herring and Joss wound up the inning with a strike-out. The Senators went out in order in their turn at the bat and the game was over.

St. Stephen's Nosed Out Sixth in Exciting Game. The St. Stephen's Sunday school team signalized their final game of their series in the league on the White Lot last evening by a batting streak in the seventh inning which not only landed them the game, but gave them a firm hold on sixth position, for which several of the teams in the second column have been aspiring. The score was McKnight's benders did not appear very difficult for the Presbyterian boys to hit, and in the first inning, through this fact, brought three runs across the plate, and at the close of the sixth inning the score stood 7 to 2 in their favor. Gordon was in good form up to this time, and two hits were all the Episcopalians could secure. The seventh proved unlucky for "Georgie," though, and with a lead off of a three-bagger the hill boys started the ball a-rolling, and when the bats had gone the rounds a sufficient number of runs had been tallied to tie the score. Sixth went out in successive order in the eighth. Miller led off for St. Stephen's with a single to left, stole second and "Billy" Hayden, who followed Duffy, the latter having fanned, sent the Sixth boys chasing out in right garden after a double acker, while Miller came home with the winning run. Miller and A. Macdonald batted well, each having scored three hits out of four times up, and Rider's game in center field was very commendable. The score:

Fourth Presbyterians Beat Out Mount Pleasant Methodists

Starting out with a tie score in the first inning the Mount Pleasant Methodist and the Fourth Presbyterian had it nip and tuck for several innings on the Mount Pleasant grounds yesterday, but the Fourths finally managed to get the upper hand, and at the end of the ninth inning were three runs to the good, the score being 5 to 2.

Several times during the game the Meth odist lads had men on the bases and all they needed to score was a hit, but at these opportune stages of the game the Mount Pleasant boys seemed to be unable to con-nect with the ball for a safety.

Fast and snappy playing was participated in by both sides and the players seemed to feel that they would have to play ball to win. The result was more than was ex-pected by the fans, three double plays being pulled off that were of the stellar variety. Kerr did the twirling for the Methodist lads, and put up a good game of ball. His opposing pitcher was "Red" Wahler, who let his opponents down easy, allowing but seven hits, which he kept well scattered.

These teams are to play off the last of Donaldson and Collie Wahler will probably be the pitchers. The score:

First Baseman Carr has had a hard time First Baseman Carr has had a hard time getting started with the stick since joining the Clevelands, but he led off with a triple yesterday and followed with four singles, quite a good day's work, to say the least. He is undoubtedly more valuable as a rungetter to the Blues than is the great Laciole.

The premier first baseman of the country, one Jake Stahl, will be back in the game Monday against the St. Louis, and game Monday against the St. Louis, and the local "fans" will have their first opportunity of seeing the big fellow since he has been going at the top of his speed. Carr was man enough to acknowledge that it was good "inside" ball.

GEORGETOWN CREW BENEFIT. Matters Shaping Up for Labor Day

Meet on Heights. The final plans for the open field and track meet for the benefit of the Georgetown crew at Georgetown field on Labor day are rapidly assuming shape.

On Wednesday evening entries will close. As a rule clubs postpone making up their lists until the last day, for until the expiration of the time for the reception of entries it will be impossible to gauge the real number of athletes who will compete.

Running races will of course be the premier events on the Labor day program. An oarsmen's race is expected to draw teams from the Analostans and Potomacs of this city and the Arundels and Ariels of Balti-more. The sace of the clubs of the Capital more. The race of the clubs of the Capital City League is assured with teams from St. Stephen's Institute, Turner Athletic Club, Carroll Institute, Gonzaga and Woodward & Lothrop. It is also likely that the Library of Congress, the only remaining member of the organization, will get out a four to race in this event.

which have applied to be classed in relay, but until the entries have closed the promoters of the mest will be unable to fix up a race such as these teams desire.

A quartet picked from the best of the runners in the Central High School squad will probably be matched with Maryland Athletic Club. While the intercity race between the Baltimore and Washington branches of the Y. M. C. A. is practically arranged, the names of the members of the team have not been given out.

Among those who are training for the 100 yards are Kent of Central High, Robey, the National Guard champion; Britton of Columbian and Sexton of Baltimore. The rivalry between the men entered in the 880 is keen and a pretty race should result. Yoder and Lorando of Georgetown, Watson of the Olympia Athletic Club and Hemmingstone of Cornell are among those who will make a fight in the half mile race.

ANALOSTAN GUN CLUB. Big Tournament to Be Held on Labor

The Analostan Gun Club is making great preparation for an all-day shoot to be given for ten events at inanimate targets. The first squad will be called to the traps promptly at 10 a.m. sharp. There will be three 15-target events and four 20-target events for money prizes, and three 25-target events for money prizes, and three 25-target events, handicaps 16 to 18 yards, for valuable merchandise prizes. The money events will be divided according to the Jack Rabbit system, which is known to be the best system of dividing money for the amateur shooter. All shooting will be done over a Labor day, September 5. The program calls the Senators few grounds. On the old grounds home aims came easy to him, but at the present first he has a hard time negotiating a single.

The St. Louis was the first club to complete a series in Boston. In ten days, including one double-header, they played to C338 people. The Cincinnatis have secured Harry Arndt, the third baseman of the Louis-villes, who has the sech sensational work this year. Arndt is a Hoosier, and hails from South Bend.
Pearl Holycross of Richmond, Ind., thought to be the best-pitcher in the Kentucky-Indiana-Tamessee League, is to be tried by the Highlanders soon. He is reported as having won twelve out of thirten games in which he pitched. It is understood that I mailistactory Holycross will join the team at the close of the minor of season, September 14. M.
Often one umpire finds matters so warm that he has to quit, but last Monday two umpires in the Cotton States League had to leave town. At Monroe Umpire Gifford was chased to his hotel and later to the train by a mob, which thought he favored Pine Bluff. At Jackson, Miss., in the Delta League, Mayor Hemmingway, who is president of the Delta League club, is alleged to have waited on Umpire Con Harlow after the game with Clarksdale and advised Harlow to leave the city for fear of trouble. heavyweight championship of the world between Jim Jeffries and Jack Munroe was one of the worst farces ever seen on the coast.

Even the men who had poor opinions of Munroe thought he would last five rounds because of his size and great strength, but the fight ended in the first half of the second round by Referee Graney giving the decision to Jeffries, as he had Munroe absolutely at his mercy, and, as Graney said, he could easily have killed him with one of his terrific right-hand punches.

When the men shook hands just before call of time Munroe sized up as the largest man who has stood before Jeffries with the single exception of Ruhlin. His legs were fully as large as Jeff's, but in body he was much smaller. The champion was just as indifferent to the result as Munroe. He went to the theater Thursday night and enjoyed the show. He retired late and did not get up yesterday until nearly noon. Among his callers during the afternoon was Jimmy Britt. They chatted together, and before The Takoma Park nine was defeated in a seven-inning game yesterday by the Unions furnished the interest of the first session of Detroit's fourth annual automobile meetthe boilermaker only won by a few inches. Jeffries put in a short time in a rowboat with Britt for company. It was his only real work of the day and he rested until the fight.

What gave Jeffries' stock a big boom was the announcement on the word of Sandy Griswold of Omaha that the champion weighed last night only 219 pounds. This was at least ten or fifteen pounds less than the public expected, and it shows that Jeffries has done more hard work than he was credited with, as he began training weighing fully 250 pounds. His present weight is six pounds less than when he fought Corbett, and then he was in finer condition than ever before.

A Remarkable Man.

As usual, Jeffries was examined carefully by his physician, who this year is Dr. W S. Porter. Dr. Porter declared, after careful examination, that Jeffries seemed to him to be invincible. He said:

"Jeffries is the most remarkably perfect specimen of physical manhood that it has ever been my good fortune to examine. Jeffries' physical construction is not that of an ordinary prize fighter. One of the chief peculiarities of his physique is the fact that his ribs and hip bones so nearly meet that you could hardly place a finger be-tween them, and when he crouches his waist is virtually incased in an iron cage. Jeffries will never be knocked out by a blow on the solar plexus. Neither Munroe nor any other fighter will ever be able to reach him there. He is a wonder. What I have explained here is the greatest thing from an anatomical standpoint. He is an exceptionally short-coupled man. As to his pulse, it shows absolutey no fatigue after all his training and the excitement attendant upon it. He is in the best possible

Munroe weighs 210, and he was a splendid specimen of physical vigor, having not one ounce of superfluous flesh. His legs and thighs are as large as those of Jeffries, but in chest measurement and arm he is smaller than the champion. Jeffries' seconds were Billy Delaney, Jack Jeffries, Joe Kennedy and Jimmy Britt, Behind Munroe were Kid McCoy, Tim, Mc-Grath, Twin Sullivan, Frank McDonald and Harry Foley.

Big Receipts.

At 9 o'clock the pavillion was rapidly filling. The indication at that hour was that there would be at least a $40,000 house. Around the ringside sporting men from cities beyond the Rockles were seated. There was considerable excitement, and the betting became lively. The odds at this hour ruled at 100 to 30 in favor of Jeffries, to 100 to 35 earlier in the evening. Munroe was the first to make his appearance in the ring. This was at 9:19. A minute later Jeffries took his corner. The announcer was Jordan, who introduced Munroe as the Butte miner. Jeffries was presented as the champion of the world. Both sented as the champion of the world. Both men were warmly received.

The fighters looked fit to battle for a king's ransom. The bulk of the applause went to Munroe, who seemed to have the crowd's sympathy. There was a laugh when McCoy was introduced as the "Beau Brummel" of the prize ring. After the laugh had subsided McCoy expressed his willingness to box any man in the world exwillingness to box any man in the world except Jeffries. Jeffries was very confident and smiled and greeted his admiring friends. Jeffries was clad in black trunks entwined with the national colors. The boilermaker after a brief chat with his personal friends, walked over to Munroe's corner and shook his rival's hand effusively. The betting re-mained at 100 to 30 in favor of the Califor-- In appearance Munroe contrasted greatly with the champion. His face wore a serious expression, and there was a lack of color in his cheeks. He otherwise looked ill at ease. He wore green tights with the national colors entwined.

The men were called from their corners for formal instructions, and no time was lost in getting together.

Round One Munroe, after a little fiddling, was the first to lead. He shot out the left but the blow was provokingly short. Jeffries smiled and danced around his opponent and then

Jeffries then put the left for a well directed punch. The blow landed on the jaw and Munroe went down and remained on the floor for eight seconds. DEPARTURE OF THE MONITORS. Coast Defense Vessels With Midshipmen Steaming Down the River. The big guns of the monitors Arkansas,

Florida and Nevada are no longer leveled toward this peaceful city. These vessels are now steaming down the Potomac river toward the Chesapeake, where they will join the other vessels of the training squadron. Valuable lessons were learned. It is said, by the midshipmen of the first class, who came to Washington several days ago on the squadron of seacoast defense monitors. They inspected the naval gun factory at the navy yard, and afterward took in the sights of the city.

The middles were not the only ones who learned lessons as a result of the trip of the monitors from the bay to Washington. Many citizens who had never seen any of Uncle Sam's big fighting craft went to the river front to see the Arkansas, Florida and Nevada as they lay at anchor off the 7th street wharves. The presence here of these monitors brought to the memories of old citizens the time, soon after the civil war, when the battle-battered "cheeseboxes" of the rebellion were moored at the Washington navy yard, on one of which some of the Booth conspirators were said to have been confined. Most of the old war-time monitors were sold for old metal by the government.

The last of the new monitors to leave the river front was the Nevada, which steamed join the other vessels of the training
